

Example: Chemical Airborne Release

A chemical causes an airborne release. One hundred percent of the material at risk is released instantaneously. Based on the wind speed and stability class, the concentration of material may move as a "cloud" over time. The measurements taken from monitoring before and after the cloud passes will vary over time.